

Chronic sleep loss or sleep disorders may affect as many as 70 million Americans.

Sleep

Toxins build up in your brain while you are awake. Quality sleep removes these toxins.

Sleep is as important to life as food and water.

You know you need quality sleep to refresh, recharge, and be ready for the next day. But why? Sleep is a complex process that scientists are just beginning to understand. We now know that sleep affects your brain, heart, lungs, metabolism, immune system, and, of course, your mood. Chronic lack of sleep leads to an increased risk of high blood pressure, heart disease, diabetes, depression and obesity.

Good sleep habits can lead to quality sleep. Some tips include:

- Be consistent. Go to bed and get up at the same time each day, even on weekends.
- Keep your bedroom quiet, dark, relaxing and cool. The recommended room temperature for optimal sleep is between 60 and 67 degrees Fahrenheit. Too cold or too hot can lead to restlessness.
- Avoid watching TV the hour before bedtime. Limit smartphones, tablets and laptops. The content coming across keeps you awake, and the blue light emitted from these devices tricks your brain into thinking it's daylight. As a result, your brain is stimulated and your body can't prep for sleep.
- Avoid large meals, caffeine and alcohol before bedtime. Don't eat within two to three hours before bedtime. Large meals rev up your metabolism which makes it hard to fall asleep. A full stomach at bedtime can also lead to indigestion.
- Get some exercise. Physical activity during the day can help you fall asleep at night.

Sleep disorders

Lack of sleep can lead to chronic diseases, so it's important to know when to seek medical help. An occasional restless night is not cause for concern, but certain sleep disorders require treatment. Some of the more recognized sleep disorders include:

- Insomnia. The inability to fall asleep or stay asleep.
- Narcolepsy. This is a serious disease causing excessive daytime sleepiness. Sleep attacks—the irresistible urge to fall asleep while awake and being physically active—are a common sign of this disease.
- Restless legs syndrome. Often described as a creeping sensation in the legs that is only relieved by movement of the legs such as walking or kicking.
- Sleep apnea. Snoring is not a sleep disorder, but when it is so severe that the person gasps or 'snorts' while sleeping, it needs to be taken seriously. Sleep apnea interrupts regular breathing and, if left untreated, can lead to serious health complications.

If you have developed patterns of not sleeping through the night, or wake up feeling tired even though you slept, see your primary care provider.

How much sleep do you and your family members need?
